OBJECTIVE

To start my career as an information analyst with a thriving company that is challenging itself in today's progressing business field.

QUALIFICATIONS

I believe that there are always positive effects from any situation, but I also believe that one must find what needs to be improved in that situation and how this improvement can be executed. As a former Captain of the Okanagan University College Men's Basketball Team, I have learned that leadership needs to be utilized in different ways for different people. Acting as the avenue of communication between the players and coaches was a very challenging but even more rewarding experience. I am a strong advocate of goal setting, both short and long term, as well as personal and team oriented. My mathematical background gives me a powerful advantage in looking at and solving problems. As this is my first step in my career as an information analyst, I am anxious to seek and learn how I can make an effective contribution to my new team of coworkers.

EDUCATION

1997-2001	Mathematics Major, Okanagan University College
2001-Present	Mathematics Major, Simon Fraser University

EMPLOYMENT

2000-Present	Merchandiser, Pepsi Bottling Group
--------------	------------------------------------

Pepsi Bottling Group has taught me the values of safety, both on the road and in varying work places. I have also learned how to work alone efficiently and how to plan and execute multiple tasks that change daily. I have also realized that asking questions of experienced co-workers has been my most rewarding source of new knowledge.
